10. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Villa Carlotta, single-storey brick and 'alu-tile' Queen Anne Federation style house with a tower, extended soon after completion to provide conventual residential accommodation, is culturally significant for the following reasons:

the place exemplifies a simplified vernacular version of the popular Queen Anne Federation style of building; the variety of changing uses of the place, from private home, to convent, school, and holiday accommodation reflects and demonstrates aspects of the history of the region and the State;

the place is valued by the community as contributing to Busselton's identity and the community's sense of place and economy based on tourism; and, the place is indicative of changing patterns of residence and social life in Western Australia.

The 1990s dining room and hotel unit extensions are considered to be of little heritage significance.
