10. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE
Warders' Cottages (fmr), comprising First Terrace, 19-29 Henderson Street (1851); Second Terrace, 33-41 Henderson Street (c.1853); and Third Terrace, 7-17 Henderson Street (1858), all of limestone construction in the Victorian Georgian style, has cultural heritage significance for the following reasons:
 the place is associated with the development of the Convict Establishment, in particular from the early 1850s, and the Fremantle Prison, a place of national significance, and, together with the Fremantle Court House and Police Station, defines the western boundary of this precinct;

the place has rarity value as one of the earliest examples of terrace housing and of purpose built public housing accommodation in the state; the place has significant aesthetic value as competently designed and built two-storey terrace houses of limestone construction in the Victorian Georgian style;

the place is representative of the housing provided for public servants, in this case prison warders, in the nineteenth century and was modelled on workers' housing in England;

the place has associations with James Manning, Clerk of Works, and Captain Henderson, Royal Engineer and Comptroller General of Convicts; and, the place is highly valued for its historical associations with Fremantle, in particular the Convict Establishment, and thus contributes to the community's sense of place.
